IRISH NEWS.

Antrim.

On the 21st ult., as a man named Jas. Wylie was driving a van along Donegal Place, Belfast, a car struck the van, and, owing to the collision, the unfortunate man was thrown upon his head into the street. The car ran over his left leg, grinding it, between the knee and ankle, almost to atoms, and it also inflicted a severe wound on his right leg. He was conveyed to the General Hospital in a senseless condition, where he shortly afterwards expired.

The Belfast Home Rule Association has forwarded a memorial to Earl Russell for presentation to the House of Lords, praying for an investigation into the conduct of Judge Dowson at the late Antrim assizes. In reply, Earl Russel said he would present the petition, but would not support the prayer. It does one good to see petitioners snubbed like that.

A special meeting of the Town Council was held on the 20th in the Town Hall for the purpose of investigating the malicious claims occuring within the borough. There was only one claimant, that of Mr. Charles Johnson, for the malicious burning of a stable and hay-loft in the New Lodge Road on the 24th May last.

The number of pounds of tea entered for consumption in Belfast, for the week ending June 7th, was 73,687 lbs.; previously this year, 1,548,010 lbs., making a total of 1,622,596 lbs. since January.

A petition has been forwarded from the inhabitants of Belfast, praying for the appointment, as Resident Magistrates, in their great city, of two skilled lawyers capable of piloting the local bench through all legal difficulties.

Armagh.

On Saturday night last a case of stabbing took place in Lurgan. A number of parties were drinking in Fleming's store, Castle street, among whom was a man named Hugh McConnell. Another man named John Smith came to the door in company with an unfortunate woman named Margaret Magee, when some dispute took place between the above-mentioned men, the result of which was that McConnell took out a knife and stabbed Smith over the right eye, the sight of which, it is thought, he will lose. Magee, in trying to save Smith, had her arm badly cut. McConnell was arrested and consigned to prison.

The parishioners of Upper Creggan, County Armagh, have just presented the Rev. Mr Loughran, C. C., of Crossmaglen, with a splendid horse, saddle and bridle worth sixty guineas, as an acknowledgment of his faithful services in the interests of religion, and his unremitting zeal as a clergyman.

The Lurgan Quarter Sessions commenced here on the 18th ult., before Mr. Hans H. Hamilton, Q. C., Chairman of the county. Four men were sentenced to short imprisonments for having arms in their possession in a proclaimed district.

Dublin.

The Riot Exaggerated.—The Dublin Irishmon says:—"There appears to have been considerable exaggeration in several of the reports furnished to the daily papers concerning the conduct of the crowd at the fire. One offence imputed to them is that they pulled away a hydrant, and so destroyed the means of applying the water for an hour, until another plan was hit upon. We are credibly informed that the hydrant affair was a mere accident, and that, so far from its being due to malice, it happened from the excess of good will shown by those who assisted in drawing the hose to direct them on the flames. The extreme unfairness of charging riotous conduct against the assembled citizens is well shown by the fact that in Francis street and Swift's alley, where the multitudes were vast, and the police absent, there was no riot at all."

Mr. R. Martin, one of the staff of the Freeman's Journal, died on the 25th ult.

Dublin.

Twenty-nine prisoners were brought before the Dublin magistrates on the 9th, charged with riot and disorderly conduct at the fire in the city on Saturday night and Sunday morning. The evidence given revealed a disgraceful course on the part of the mob. The Lord Mayor deposed that he had scarcely arrived upon the ground before he received a heavy blow from a stone upon the chest which injured him severely. His lordship said he never witnessed such disgraceful conduct, and he regretted that the city of which he was chief magistrate should have been made the scene of such an occurrence. Thirteen of the prisoners were committed for trial, eleven remanded, and the rest discharged.

On the 20th ult., a crowded and highly influential meeting was held at the chapel of the Immaculate Conception to provide funds for the erection of a new church at Inchicore, at which a subscription list was opened, and a large number of contributions handed in. We received by the official register of the Tralee Poorhouse that the number of inmates on the 21st instant was 439 as against 369 at the corresponding period last year—an increase of 70. When we take this sad fact in connection with the increased emigration to America and the rising emigration to New Zealand, we feel constrained to ask with wonder "where is the prosperity of which we hear so much?"

At the Kildare Quarter Sessions on the 20th ult., an action for a "broken nose," entered by a Mrs. May against Mr. William Walsh, both of Athy, was tried. Damages laid at £40. From the evidence it appeared the lady was going down a lane, and the night being somewhat dark, she knocked her face against defendant's dray, which was heeled up in the way with such violence as to produce a compound fracture of her facial ornament. The jury having heard the evidence, found a verdict for £15 damages and costs.

Louth.

The County Census.—The Dunkalk Democrat says:—A couple of weeks back we published an abstract of the Census Commissioners' returns for the county of Louth, and the county of the town of Drogheda. These returns show what a havoc British misgovernment has made amongst the population. The inhabitants of Louth in 1821, amounted to 119, 199; in 1841, they were 12,240; and in 1871 they numbered only 84,021. What a powerful argument against the continuance of the Act of Union! In the course of thirty years' that is, from 1841 to 1871, the country has lost 47,219 of its people, or nearly one out of every three in the population. The religious census shows that Louth is a truly Catholic county, and that its people maintain the old faith with the utmost fidelity. It contains 64,367 Catholics, 4,878 Protestants, 1,001 Presbyterians, and 126 Methodists. The three last named denominations enjoy as much security and freedom as if the entire county were inhabited by people holding their own faith.

SPIRIT OF THE PRESS.

Patriotism and Parliamentary Action.

On this suggestive subject we take from the Dublin Irishman the following splendid article:

Ireland does not stand or fall by the fate of any election. If we do not then readily fall into extacies of delight or paroxysms of despair, whenever an election is decided, let our apparent stoicism be excused. We have seen that strong band of brothers who formed what was profanely called "O'Connell's Tail," laboring until they shook asunder without accomplishing anything for Ireland. Afterwards we beheld that resolute and united phalanx of Irish members, whom the irreverent termed the "Pope's Brass Band;" they also were pledged never to desist from independent opposition, until they accomplished certain objects. Yet they were broken up before any of the ends they wished for were accomplished: it is needless to describe the reasons why. The bright vision passed, and in a little time Ireland might exclaim, with Praed:

> Some lie beneath the church-yard grass,
> And some beside the Speaker.

On the other hand great and wonderful changes have been wrought in the fortunes of our country, whilst the Irish Representatives, true to their country, formed a mere minute minority of some half-dozen. If the English minister had judged simply by what was called the Representation of Ireland, he would not have disestablished the Church, nor made any alteration in the Land Laws.

Now, experience is thrown away upon us, if we do not learn something by facts so expressive as these. From them it appears that the following conclusion may be drawn and laid down as a general rule:—It is not so much the extent as the intensity of feeling in a country which influences its fortunes.

The intensity may be shown in various ways, as all men know. But it may not so generally be recognized as operative in an election. The steady increase in the number of members of Parliament who profess the faith of Self-Government demonstrates, of course, the extending influence of the principle. But the cause of this extending is the intensity of national feeling in the country.

What signify, in reality, the phenomena of which we are observers? This: the National Faith had almost died out of the souls of the upper classes in Ireland; in the breasts of the middle classes it was faith inoperative of good works; when it had thus ceased to manifest itself in those classes, it became condensed and concentrated as into a burning flame in the hearts of the peasantry. Its hot breath scorched up some abuses, but now it works differently; it is again becoming diffused amongst all ranks. Its flame communicates the vivid light of national faith to those souls where so recently it was darkened, or deadened or extinct. After a long swoon the heart may beat vehemently to prevent the invasion of death, then diminish to quieter action as the blood flows more freely through the benumbed members. So now we see the warm tide of national life forced into long-useless members of our country's organism, and then the deathly pallor and the fitful fever flush give place to the roseate hue of returning health.

"Better," said a well-known historical personage upon whom a peerage was pressed, "Better be first among commoners than last among Lords." It may require much yet, to awaken the sentiment of such a pride in many souls. They are encrusted with the indurated prejudices and passions, fears and wraths of many years, which it is difficult to loosen and shake off, even although the circumstances may have passed which produced them. But the task is not impossible, nor is the end far. Under the radiant sun of true patriotism the cerements will melt and loosen, and their straitened souls shall be delivered into the fullness of national life.

We hold it to be impossible for man born on Irish soil, whatever be his antecedents, long to resist the impulse of honor or refuse audience to the prompting phrase: "Better be foremost amongst Irishmen than last amongst Englishmen."

A San Francisco Sunday.

One of the Chronicle's able and imaginative reporters then grapples with the criminal doings of our fellow citizens: Civilization seemed unusually shaky on its pegs last Sunday night in San Francisco—and the way the criminal element boiled up and made it lively for the municipal authorities brought back the bloody memories of '49. It seemed as if the devil was sitting on top of Telegraph Hill, stirring up the town with a very long handle and correspondingly active fork. Prison-keeper Rainey was kept busily engaged in booking the arrests from sundown to midnight. As fast as he sat down he got up to answer the brass-knocker, and his pen was hardly allowed to get dry behind his ear. No sooner was one man examined, booked searched and sent to his cell, than another would be hauled in to take his place. "What the devil has got into this town?" the prison keeper would exclaim every few minutes. "How they do come in! Nothing like it since I've been in the business. Everybody on the cut and shoot. Wonder if I'll get home alive! And here comes another man with his head all hacked up, and I guess his ears are gone, too." And so Rainey was kept working like a beaver to keep his books balanced. The Heathen Chinee was particularly on the rampage last night, and the criminal commotion in his part of the town kept the police unremitingly at work. What was on foot nobody could tell, but it seemed quite probable that the Celestials were celebrating the anniversary of some heathen divinity, in which part of the regular exercises consisted in going about and cutting up people with hatchets and razors.

DECLARATION OF PRINCIPLES OF THE IRISH NATIONALIST,

A WEEKLY NEWSPAPER,

Published Every Saturday at No. 5 Post Street, San Francisco,

—BY THE—

Nationalist Printing and Publishing Co.

The friends of Ireland and the friends of universal freedom have long felt the want on this coast of a newspaper which should rigorously exclude from its columns all matters not tending to the advocacy of their principles, the defense of their rights, the increase of their knowledge and numbers, the elevation of their sentiments and character, and the formation of an effective union among all sections, parties, creeds and classes of liberty-loving Irishmen and their allies.

To supply this want, as well as to contribute something towards the establishment of a Republic on Irish soil, and the spread of free institutions to every part of the earth, has the NATIONALIST been established. The importance of the work to be performed, and the necessity of performing it well, have led to the formation of a Joint-Stock Company of Irishmen, Irish-Americans and others, under the title of "THE NATIONALIST PRINTING AND PUBLISHING COMPANY." This Company undertakes to publish the NATIONALIST in future, and pledges itself that this newspaper shall be distinguished by the following characteristics.

1. The main object of the NATIONALIST shall be to assist in the establishment of a REPUBLIC ON IRISH SOIL. As means towards that end, it will inculcate the necessity of a cordial union among all sections of Irishmen, irrespective of creed, race or locality; the advisability of forgiving and forgetting past differences; the need that exists for harmony among the different organizations of Irishmen; the futility of expecting Irish liberty from any other source than Irish arms in Irish hands; the duty that is incumbent on Irish-Americans to sympathize with and assist their brothers at home; and the most efficient mode of rendering that assistance most conducive to its intended object.

2. It will advocate the cause of all oppressed peoples, and the right of every nation to its own autonomy.

3. It will favor the spread of Republicanism and free institutions among all nations, and oppose aristocracy and monarchy by every honorable means at its disposal.

4. In religion it will be strictly neutral, excluding from its columns all inflammatory references to religious and sectarian subjects. This is believed to be not only expedient, but necessary, as religious differences have been the bane of many generations of Irishmen. Provided, however, that current religious news may be inserted without prejudicial comments.

5. Sectionalism, or ignorant prejudices arising among men because of their coming from different parts of Ireland, shall be discountenanced, and its criminality exposed.

6. No line of the NATIONALIST shall ever be devoted to indulgence in unfriendly personalities. When, however, the principles of Irish nationality or of American republicanism are attacked, the attack shall be vigorously repelled.

7. In the politics of the City of San Francisco and of the State of California, the NATIONALIST shall be strictly neutral, regarding party affiliations as no cause for making any man a friend or an enemy; and it shall neither advocate nor attack the claims of any political party or individual when seeking political position, Federal, State or Municipal.

8. It will also be neutral, but friendly in its treatment of the internal affairs of the United States, but in reference to the foreign policy of the country, it will hold itself thoroughly independent.

9. A speciality will be made of giving publicity to all matters of interest to the Irish societies and military companies of the City and of the State.

10. The Labor movement and the respective rights and obligations of Workingmen and Capitalists shall receive that attention which their great importance demands.

The main object of this undertaking being the union of Irishmen with a view towards Irish independence, all the obstacles which might impede that union have been, as far as possible, removed, so that the NATIONALIST might furnish a platform broad enough to give standing room to all genuine lovers of liberty, and there shall not be any deviations from these principles permitted in the columns of this journal under any circumstances. Among the stockholders of this Company are representatives of almost all the Irish organizations of California, whether revolutionary, benevolent, literary or military. While we rely on our future performances rather than our present promises, while we believe ourselves competent, as well as determined, to repel the attacks of all enemies of our cause, and while we acknowledge having already received generous support, we yet invite the cordial cooperation of all to enable us to make the NATIONALIST take a front-rank place among the newspapers devoted to the service of Ireland and Liberty.

The above is the declaration of principles which the Nationalist Publishing Company pledges itself to carry out to the utmost of its ability; and, as this company is organized solely for that purpose, and not for any purpose of gain, it confidently appeals for support to all Irishmen who desire to see their native land an INDEPENDENT NATION, and likewise to all lovers of HUMAN FREEDOM.

THE "GREAT WEST" may be better appreciated from the following statistics. There are eleven Territories, two or three of them are twice or three times as large as all of New England. Colorado is thirteen times as large as Massachusetts, while Dakota and Arizona are half again as large as Colorado. The eleven Territories contain over one billion and a quarter of acres, exceeding by nearly two hundred thousand square miles, the aggregate territory of all the present admitted States of the Union. The Territory of Alaska contains 369,549,000 acres.

SLIGHTLY sarcastic was the Yankee clergyman who paused and addressed a man coming into church after the sermon had begun, with the remark, "Glad to see you, sir. Come in; always glad to see those here late who can't come early." And decidedly self-possessed was the man thus addressed in the presence of an astonished congregation, as he responded; "Thank you, would you favor me with the text?"

United Workingmen's San Francisco CO-OPERATIVE

The above stamp is placed on the Goods made by this Boot and Shoe Manufacturing Corapany, and they desire to inform the Trade and the Public that an unprincipled Boot and Shoe firm of this city (a house doing a large business, and which ought to be above such a trick) are stamping their Worthless Chinese-made goods with a partial imitation of our Stamp, hoping to sell their goods as our make, and thereby injure our trade. We employ no Chinese labor, nor ever did, and our goods have always given satisfaction, and built up a trade which those parties in their petty meanness are seeking to deprive us of. Therefore, we caution all who wish to buy our goods and patronize WHITE LABOR, to see that they are stamped as above.

DRYKDOHERTY'S

PRIVATE MEDICAL & SURGICAL INSTITUTE

(FOUNDED IN 1853.

No. 519 Sacramento Street, corner of Leidesdorff street (a few doors below the What Cheer House.) Private entrance on Leidesdorff street, San Francisco.

Established expressly to afford the Afflicted sound and scientific Medical Aid, in the treatment and cure of all Private and Chronic Diseases, cases of secrecy, and all sexual disorders.

TO THE AFFLICTED.

DR. W. K. DOHERTY RETURNS HIS SINCERE thanks to his numerous patients for their patronage, and would take this opportunity to remind them that he continues to consult at his Institute for the cure of CHRONIC DISEASES of the LUNGS, LIVER, KIDNEYS, DIGESTIVE and GENITO-URINARY ORGANS, and all private diseases, viz: SYPHILIS, in all its forms and stages; SEMINAL WEAKNESS, and all the horrid consequences of self-abuse; GONORRHŒA, GLEET, STRICTURES, NOCTURNAL and DIURNAL EMISSIONS, SEXUAL DEBILITY, DISEASES OF THE BACK and LOINS, INFLAMMATION OF THE BLADDER and KIDNEYS, etc.; and he hopes his long experience and successful practice will continue to insure him a share of public patronage. By the practice of many years in Europe and the United States, he is enabled to apply the most efficient and successful remedies against diseases of all kinds. He cures without mercury, charges moderate, treats his patients in a correct and honorable way, and has references of unquestionable veracity from men of known respectability and high standing in society. All parties consulting him by letter or otherwise, will receive the best and gentlest treatment and implicit secrecy.

DR. DOHERTY would call attention to the following certificates, from two of his patients who having fully recovered their health, desire to make known their remedial agent. It will be seen their statements are fully authenticated by a Notary public.

The welfare of society imperiously demands their publicity, and they are given more to warn the unwary than to sound the praises of a Physician, of whom hundreds of like cases can be cited, during a practice of more than twenty years.

A CASE OF GLEET AND STRICTURE.

DR. DOHERTY—Dear Sir: I feel my health so fully restored that, in common gratitude, I believe I should make you some written acknowledgment, for your fee was small for the work performed.

I arrived in this city from the East about one year ago, and was then suffering from an old case of Gleet, complicated with Stricture. Being a stranger in the city, and believing that those doctors who gave such positive assurances of success were necessarily the best, I placed myself in their charge, and continued under their treatment until I had lost nearly all hope and a considerable sum of money.

I wish to say now that you are the sixth doctor I have employed, and the only one that has ever done me any service. My Gleet is wholly cured, the Stricture is all removed, and my general health is better than it has been for years.

In conclusion, I would say to the many unfortunates who require medical advice, if you have any doubt as to whom you should employ, ask DR. DOHERTY for my address and call and see me. (I keep a store in this city.) My experience may save you many dollars.

I would also add that in the early stage of my disease, I used a large amount of the preparations advertised as infallible cures for Gonorrhœa, Gleet, etc., but never derived any benefit from them.

I am, Doctor, very truly yours, L—H—.

SEMINAL WEAKNESS—A SWORN TO CERTIFICATE OF MOST REMARKABLE CURE OF SPERMATORRHŒA.

A desire to benefit suffering humanity, and a feeling of gratitude to DR. W. K. DOHERTY, alone induces me to make this statement. For many years I had been afflicted with that fearful disease known as "Spermatorrhœa" or Seminal weakness, the result of self-abuse, but till 1855 experienced but little trouble or inconvenience. In that year, however, I had Seminal weakness to a fearful extent, which was soon followed by the most alarming symptoms, as weakness of the back and limbs, pain in the head dimness of vision, nervousness and general debility. My mind, too, was affected to such an extent as to seriously impair my memory; my ideas were confused, and spirits depressed. I was averse to society, had evil forebodings and self-distrust, and was entirely unfitted for any of the duties of life. From 1855 to the summer of 1863, I employed the very best medical talent I could find, and spent several hundred dollars but in no instance obtained more than temporary relief. I had about concluded there was no relief for me in this world, but reading DR. DOHERTY'S card I thought I should call and see him, as he charged nothing for consultation. I had an interview with the doctor at his office, in Sacramento street, and his fee for treatment was so reasonable, I determined to try him, though I did not expect much benefit from his treatment. On the fifth of December last I placed myself under his care; in one week I found myself very much improved, and now, after five weeks treatment, I feel thoroughly cured of all my troubles, and in the enjoyment of the best of health. Hoping that my experience may be of benefit to others similarly afflicted, I subscribe myself.

JAMES JOHNSTON.

Subscribed and sworn to before me, this 15th day January, A. D., 1864.

TO FEMALES.

When a female is enervated, or afflicted with disease, as weakness of the back and limbs, pain in the head, dimness of sight, loss of muscular power, palpitation of the heart, irritability, nervousness, extreme urinary difficulties, derangement of digestive functions, general debility, vaginitis, all diseases of the womb, hysteria, sterility, and all other diseases peculiar to females, she should go or write at once to the celebrated female doctor, W. K. DOHERTY, at his Medical Institute and consult him about her troubles and disease. The Doctor is effecting more cures than any other Physician in the State of California. Let no false delicacy prevent you, but apply immediately and save yourself from painful sufferings and premature death. All Married ladies whose delicate health or other circumstances prevent an increase in their families, should write or call at DR. W. K. DOHERTY'S Medical Institute, and they will receive every possible relief and help.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Patients (male or female) residing in any part of the country however distant, who may desire the opinion and advice of Dr. Doherty in their respective cases, and who think proper to submit a written statement of such, in preference to holding a personal interview, are respectfully assured that their communications will be held most sacred. The Doctor is a regular graduate, and may be consulted with perfect confidence.

If the case be fully and candidly described, personal communication will be unnecessary, as instructions for diet, regimen, and the general treatment of the case itself (including the remedies,) will be forwarded without delay, and in such a manner as to convey no idea of the purport of the letter or parcel so transmitted.

Consultations at the office or by letter, FREE. Permanent cure guaranteed or no pay. Address,

Celtic Characteristics.

The Celts have never been equalled for impetuous daring. They were the bravest of men, but not the most courageous. Hence, after scattering the foe as the hurricane scatters, they were themselves scattered like the chaff. Vanquishers of the Germans and the Romans, they were by the Germans and the Romans vanquished. With brilliant and noble gifts, they were turbulent, anarchic, fickle and fantastic. Their saddest humiliation, their most irreparable misfortune, was the loss or their language. The Celts have thus not been permitted, like the Germans and Sclavonians, to tell their own tale. We know of them only from their enemies. The fragments of their language and literature which survive in Ireland, in Wales, in Scotland, and in the West of France, drew not aside the veil from the ancient Celtic life.

The poetry of the Irish, of the Welsh, of the Bretons, of the Highlanders, is mournful. Do not the Ossianic utterances—whether we view them as genuine or not—typify the undying sorrow of the Celtic heart?—Call not the Celt light, and vain, and shallow, perpetually joyous and perpetually hunting after joys. Rather see in him one who pants for excitement, who is whirled from extreme to extreme, but to whom the abyss of anguish, into which he so often sinks, unfolds divine truths hidden from the sage. The Celt is an idealist both in his good and in his evil, far back in the dim centuries. And how unhappy, in whatever age he may live, must the idealist be? Perhaps the Celt was not well adapted to be either civilized or a civilizer. Yet, indirectly he has been the chief civilizer of European communities. His restless temper made him the agitator of antiquity, his restless temper makes him an agitator still. Without movement there could be no culture, and men would plunge into gross materialism. But for France the world would go to sleep, though the crimes of France be myriad and monstrous; and but for the Celtic elements within her, England would be alone and lifeless. It is singular that unity should be so eminently a French fact, seeing that the Celts were so notable for disunity: yet unity came to the French from abroad. It would be curious to follow the gradual growth of its empire till the ancient Celtic disunity vaniihed completely before it. The Celts had a strong dislike to fat folks—to the protuberant paunch. Their descendants inherit this dislike, and are seldom themselves corpulent. The Frenchman, when he caricatures the Englishman, depicts him as odiously obese. When the Englishman caricatures the Frenchman he sharpens him into a prodigy of leanness and angularity.

Emigration to Brazil.

A painful sensation has been produced at Leamington by the statesments of a carpenter, named Perkins, who has just returned from Brazil with a heartrending account of the condition of the agricultural laborers who were induced to emigrate to that country last year. The morning after he and his family arrived in Rio de Janeiro a person called "Fitz", a Government agent, fetched them out of the ship at 7 o'clock, and conveyed them out through the streets in a van, upon which was written in large letters the word "transport." They thought they were going to the "Government House of Reception," but he drove them to a railway station, saying he was going to send them ten miles into the country. They had nothing to eat before leaving the ship, and the only refreshment provided was a small basket of penny loaves, which a nigger brought to them at the station and emptied down on the floor. "Fitz" gave them one each, and that was all they had except something Mrs. Perkins brought from a neighboring shop. They were then conveyed to Mendez, a distance of 99 miles, through a mountainous, desolate, and barren country, the sight of which they describe as sufficient "to daunt any Englishman's heart' On the way they passed through twelve tunnels They arrived at Mendez about three o'clock in the afternoon, and were received by another agent, who took them to a wretched hovel, about 13 feet by 15, and said that was where they would have to live. The floor of the hovel was dirt, and at the time they entered was covered with puddles of water. The miserable tenement had no sleeping apartment or convenience of any kind. They were sent some food consisting of rice, black-beans, and "coney sack." This was all uncooked, and as the emigrants had neither fire nor utensils it was nearly eight o'clock before the evening meal was ready. Although they had been traveling all day on a penny roll, and were dreadfully hungry, the women and children refused the food, or partook of it sparingly. The next day diarrhoea broke out among them and the whole party was dangerously ill for several days After staying three weeks at Mendez, Perkins and Minet insisted upon returning to Rio. At Rio Perkins and his family took the yellow fever, from which his eldest son died. On his recovery the and Mine escaped to England, and in a few days their wives and children arrived in Liverpool, he passage money being paid by English residents at Rio.

EMINENT MEN.—Cardinal Wolsey was the son of a pork butcher. Oliver Cromwell was the son of a London brewer. Whitefield was the son of an inn-keeper at Gloucester. Columbus was the son of a weaver, and a weaver himself. Boliver was a druggist. Mehemet Ali was a barber. Virgil was the son of a potter. Milton was the son of a scavenger. Horace was the son of a shop-keeper. Domosthenes was the son of a cutler. Robert Burns was a plowman of Ayrshire. Shakespeare was the son of a wool-stapler.

"Honor and shame
From no condition rise;
Act well your part,
There all the honor lies."

Parliament having refused to entrust the Rock of Cashel to a body of trustees representative of the nation, the venerable ruin has now passed into the custody of the Board of Works, who have carved their initials on the face of the rock near the entrance, and have appointed Mr. G. White to superintend the "improvements," the cost of which is estimated at £5,000. A further sum of £3,000, it is said, will be expended in preserving the buildings and maintaining a caretaker.

This is a specimen of editorial courtesy in Kentucky, evidently a little personal in its tenor: "A nasty puppy, in the person of the editor of a weekly newspaper emanating from a mud-hole somewhere in the northeastern part of this State, has taken it into his pate to bark at us; but we are acquainted with the silly cur, and feel not in the least bit alarmed, as the impudent little pup is too cowardly to bite."

THE IRISH PEOPLE.

It is the sad lot of the Irish race not only to be "born to oppression, as the sparks fly upwards," but endure the scorn and contumely of the oppressor. In accounting for the perennial misery of a country upon which Nature has lavished her choicest gifts—a soil abounding in the elements of greatness, and the resources of wealth—a land exuberant with joy and teeming with fertility—her tyrants ascribe all her misfortunes to inferiority of race and religion. This is the convenient cloak under which despotism conceals its cloven foot. It is like the seducer loathing and calumniating the victim he has betrayed. British statesmen and their organs attribute the ruin of Ireland not to their own policy, but, forsooth, to the Catholic religion and the Celtic origin of the people. A land which God made to "flow with milk and honey," they have made to flow with blood and crime. It is a reproach to them among the nations, and, inventing a lie, they utter it with malice prepense, to screen their own turpitude.

It is true that in one sense religion has been made to operate in Ireland against the freedom of the country. Sectarian animosity has done much to blind the people to their common interests, and prevent their uniting in the common cause. But this is a perversion of true religion. Had the Irish been all Catholic or all Protestant they would have long since broken their yoke. Taking advantage of the existing difference in religious creed the enemy fostered mutual hate and distrust, and made both parties forget their country and their Christianity together. A new generation arose who had studied the history of Ireland and the history of other countries. They buried polemics in the red graves of their famished fellow countrymen—they smoked the calumet of peace together, and swore that they would overthrow the "dynasty of the devil" by uniting the sects like the bundle of sticks. But evil counsels prevailed against their purpose, and they have failed for the present.

Liberty then has nought to do with religious belief. Its apostles and disciples have been found among all creeds. The Spartans of Thermopylæ were Polytheists. Washington was a Protestant; and Carroll, of Carrollton was a Catholic. The Leaguers of Boston were Puritans. The unconquerable Swiss, whom Tell, a Catholic, freed from domestic tyranny, and who still on their native hills retain Republican freedom amidst the conspiring monarchies of Europe, are for the most part Presbyterian. A considerable number of the Confederate Cantons are Catholic. The religion of Italy is Catholic. The Italians have nobly struck at Austrian despotism. France is a Catholic country—its people have hurled the most crafty of tyrants from his throne, and on its ruins erected a free republic, baptized in blood.

And does not the same Celtic current flow in their veins that pulsates in an Irish heart? The peasantry of France too are among the happiest on the face of the earth. Why? Because they "sit under their own vine and fig tree, none daring to make them afraid." They reap the fruits of their toil, and enjoy the rewards of their industry. They, the inhabitants, possess the land, for themselves. They do not expend their labor for the stranger or the stranger's garrison. Doomed in common with the rest of the human race to bear the primeval curse, they must work for their "daily bread;" but in their case the curse is tempered with the blessing that accompanied it: "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread." They do sweat, but then they have bread to eat. The Irish serf sweats too; but he eats no bread. In his case the laws of nature and of God are reversed. If the birds of the air, the fishes of the sea, or the wild beasts of the forest seek for food, their search is rewarded with sustenance. The human savage that hunts the deer eats the venison he kills. But the Irishman is an exception to all animated nature. He tills the ground; he sows the seed; the golden harvest nurtured by the dews of heaven and matured by the Summer sun, waves temptingly for his sickle; he reaps, but eats not. The "lords of the soil" sweep the whole produce away, and then divide the spoil with the government who lend them their hired soldiery and police to rob and murder. The producers may starve in a ditch, or drag out a miserable existence in poor-law bastile' if they cannot manage to live upon raw turnips, nettles, sea weed, or putrid carrion. The peasantry of France tracing their descent to the same source as the Irish, men of like passions, swayed by the same generous impulses, having the same virtues and the same failings, are prosperous and contented, because in a happy moment they realized their dream of Freedom and rent their chains, while the Irish groan under a bondage from which none but themselves can make free.

Dean Kirwan, P. P., Murrintown, has joined the Home Government Association.

But it is not necessary to go for an example to the Celts of France. We take the Irish themselves, when transplanted from their own country to any other on the face of the globe, and we find them competing with the native and thriving and prospering. Notwithstanding the peculiar disadvantages that cling to all emigrants, they flourish both in England and in this country, and in point of race betray no inferiority. The laboring class of the Irish in Liverpool are found to be as industrious, as orderly, as stout workers as any native of Lancashire. Are not a large proportion of the toilers on this continent, the men who have so largely contributed to develope its resources and to make it the glorious country it is—are not they Irish exiles or the sons of exiles? Contrast their comfort and happiness with the wretched condition of their brethren at home, and say whether race or religion are the causes of the difference? Are not Irishmen among the most skilful mechanics in this country? And if we proceed from the labor and craft of the hand to the operation of the mind, do we find the Irishman deficient? We might place the Burkes, the Grattans, the Swifts, the Plunkets, the Bushes and the Sheridans, in juxta-position with the great spirits of any other nation in the world, and not fear the results of a comparison. Do not Irishmen fill the most difficult and important posts in America? Have not men of Celtic blood—men whose fathers were born in Ireland—sat in the President's chair of the United States? In fine, do not Irish emigrants and their children become eminent citizens in every country to which they emigrate? The theory, therefore, of inferiority of race or of religious creed will not account for the degraded condition of their kindred at home. It is true that a race may become deteriorated by long oppression unresisted, and that the mind as well as the body suffers from inferior food. That deterioration has actually taken place in Ireland we are also free to admit—not indeed of the whole people—for in this her darkest hour she has many sons worthy of freedom, men who are the salt of the land, but deterioration of large numbers of the population, who have no appreciation of liberty, because they were born slaves and have never yet been taught its blessings. But this is a very different thing from an original taint of inferior blood. Thank God, the evil is not incurable. But this is a curious fact in natural history that iron and other metals by long exposure to excessive vibration lose their fibrous character, and become crystalized, brittle and worthless. Let them be submitted to the process of the fire and the hammer, and they again renew their former strength and tenacity. Thus the Celtic race in Ireland have lost their tone by continued thraldom. But this will not, must not be forever, nor for long. They have still in them all the elements of a great nation; and only the purifying influences of revolution and the fiery furnace of war are wanted to restore the metal of which the Irish people are made, to its pristine power and capacity. When they resolve upon freedom, they will be free, and they will resolve, when they become conscious of their own strength and have faith in success.

FREE PUBLIC LIBRARY.

There is scarcely any community more essentialy a reading one than the people of San Francisco yet strange to say we have not a single Free Public Libary. In the matter of Benevolent Institution we are not by any means behind the age, several of our charitable Institutions would compare favorably with those of older and more wealthy communities, both in their size and management. A Free Public Library is not as much a necessity as an Almshouse, an hospital, or a Foundling Asylum, nevertheless it is a want which in San Francisco is felt by the working classes, as it is for that portion of the population solely that such an Institution is intended—Any one who has ever been present when the doors of the Free Library of Liverpool are thrown open and has seen the dense throng of men and boys who fill its capacious halls and occupy every seat cannot fail to be struck with the idea that such an Institution is a powerful agent for good or ill. Melbourne is comparatively a new city yet a move has long since been made in the matter and at the present moment it can boast of an extensive library and a Museum of which any city might feel proud. San Francisco is not as old a city as Melbourne, nor as populous as Liverpool. The number of street arabs and unemployed workmen even in our dullest season are comparatively few, still our city is old enough, and rich enough to build a Public Free Library, and there cannot be the least doubt that it would be extensively patronized. Scarcely a week and certainly no month passes that some Croisus does not endow some benevolent Institution or Academy of Science. It is no doubt a commendable project to alleviate the suffering and smoothe a path of life for the sick and indigent, or elevate and enoble mankind by the aid of science, but some attention should be paid to those who cannot put forward their utter helplessness, as a plea for aid but who nevertheless have a claim on the generosity of their more fortunate brethren, which it is impossible to deny. A Free Public Library where the young idea as well as the old, may pick up seeds of knowledge afterwards bearing golden fruit, together with the Training ship at present being agitated for, may have the desired effect on the genus hoodlum, for ever stop the cry which innumerable lecturers are constantly raising of "What shall we do with our boys!"

Sixty men and an engineer are employed in grading for the Benecia Narrow Gauge Railroad. About a mile is completed.

DUELLING IN THE SOUTH.

Feeling in the Southern States with regard to the Code, or more properly the by-law of fashionable murder is undergoing a revolution. It is no longer accounted honorable to sacrifice the life of a friend at the altar of offended dignity, and it is probable that after a few hot blooded men of leisure who having nothing better to occupy their time emulate the gladiators of Rome, have been tried and found guilty of the crime of murder, the practice of duelling will become as obsolete in the Southern States as wss the once fashionable art of the Pugilist. We are led to these reflections by the case of young McCarthy who is being proceeded against for the killing of Mordicai in a duel. The facts of the case are so very well known that repetion would be superfluous.—What action may be taken on the matter it is impossible at present to say, but judging by the spirit which has been evinced of late by the Southern people the crisis has come and Mr. McCarthy may account himself lucky if he escapes the punishment he deserves — which anyone deserves who being possessed of more blood than brains give loose rein to their fiercest passions and violate in their pursuit of an irrational revenge, all laws human and divine Mr. McCarthy is we believe of Irish descent, or at least we would infer so from his patronymic; his adversary was a Jew, and expiated his rashness with his life, but this fact should not, and we believe does not influence any right minded Irishman. When a countryman is guilty of a crime, which he deliberately commits, when he rushes into danger not blindly but with due deliberation, and jeopardizes his life in an attempt to sacrifice that of another he surrenders all claims to the respect of every honorable citizen. The law should be allowed to take its course, and no attempt made to palliate his guilt. We are not by any means anxious to see Mr. McCarthy expiate his crime on the scaffold, or immured in a living tomb, but we cannot refrain from expressing our abhorrence of the duello and our reprobation of a crime heinous in itself and dangerous to society.

FLUNKEYDOM.

The spirit of "Caste" is peculiarly strong in England, and unfortunately has spread in some measure over Ireland too. Anything Royal be it only one of Her Majesty's footmen, or her favorite poodle is received with acclamation by intensely loyal people, but if the footman happens to belong to a foreign potentate—if the poodle is as luckly as to have opened his canine optics in the palace of some alien monarch, they become a center of attraction to the whole of light Cockneydom, and the happy Briton who is so luckly as to secure a smile from the lackey or a lock of hair from the poodle is elevated to the seventh heaven of loyal enthusiasm and goes down a happy man to the grave, trumpeting over the praises of his royal acquaintance. This is not by any means an exaggeration. The ovation which the Shah of Persia received, on his landing in England was such, as no hero, aristocratic or plebeian received in the proudest days of Rome's omnipotence. The shouts of acclamation which greeted Coriolanus on his triumphal entry into Rome were mere murmurings when compared with that one, wild excited but loyal howl which issued forth from the vast throat of Cockneydom as the oriental Potentate made his progress through the streets of London —There is nothing peculiarly majestic or imposing in the Shahs personal appearance there is nothing very heroic in the character of the Persian people, notwithstanding Tom Moore, to the contrary, yet every English pictorial journal teems with portraits of the Persian Prince. Now it is a full face portrait of the Shah which stares out at you. Now it is a profile, then he is pictured on horseback, on foot, sleeping, eating, speech-making in fact in every possible and impossible attitude which a man may assume in the ordinary routine of every day public life. The only wonder is that the ambitious artist's do not penetrate into the privacy of his divan and record the actions of the Prince when removed from the critical eye of the public. No doubt there are artists and journals enterprising enough to do so, and Cockneys with an over weening sense of loyalty who would make such an enterprise a profitable one by their support. There are plenty of lordly halls and pleasant boudoirs whose owners would gladly decorate them with the most ridiculous engravings be they only fragrant with royalty—and point exultingly and say. "Thus stood the Shah as he rebuked his ninth wife," or "Thus he grinned as the preliminary twitches of the gout affected his great toe." Luckily the public taste is variable so that for the present we will be spared the torture of such an artistic infliction. It is something to know, however, hat we are rapidly approximating to it.

THE THOMAS DAVIS CLUB, I. C. independent of its revolutionary character has added a benevolent feature to the organization. This branch of the society promises to be a flourishing one, judging from the inducements offered to the members. The constitution and by-laws, were framed at the meeting of the Club held at I. C. Hall on Market street on Wednesday evening.

MARKET REPORT,—Having secured the services of a first class commercial reporter we are prepared to announce that in our next issue a full and correct market report will be furnished to our readers. The market report will be in the future the not least conspicuous feature of our paper, which even now challenges comparison with many journals more pretentious and boasting a wide circulation.

THE McMANUS CLAIMS.

C. D. O'Sullivan, Wm. F. Cashman, and C. M. A. Buckley having published a card reflecting on the accuracy of certain statements contained in the recent letter of Miss McManus, that lady thinks it incumbent on her to make the following reply:—

To the Public.—In my letter to my fellow countrymen I gave them a true statement of facts and dates relative to my suit, and had of course to state where it rested, in the Supreme Court. My opponents must have a very poor opinion of the Justice of the Supreme Court Judges, if they think that a letter from me could induce them to give an unjust decision. They stated that we were nonsuited in the Fourth District Court, which gave them no opportunity to defend themselves. That is untrue, as they had the same opportunity as I had. They also made another misstatement, that I depended entirely upon the testimony of squatters and men of questionable integrity. Do they call W. P. Humphreys, Esq., County Surveyor, James Phelan, Esq., the Hon. Michael Hayes, and Mr. James Mayer, men of questionable integrity? I refer all who may be interested in my cause, to the notes in the Fourth District Court, or my transcript, for the names of numerous other good and honest men who have sworn in my favor. And that my opponents should distort their testimony to benefit themselves, is as base as their other acts. They also try to mislead the public (as to the expenditures on his land by my brother), who now can have no idea of the expense and labor of even hiring a man and dray to go—say from the Plaza—out there with lumber and materials in those early California days. We proved my brother's fence to be a good one, composed of lumber and brush wood, and that his so-called shanty was sufficiently good for a gentleman to live in. Numerons citizens now in opulence lived in houses as humble as his, in early California days. John W. Williams and other witnesses testify that the fences put up by McManus did not cross the line of any one else, and enclosed lands that were entirely vacant, for he was the first settler upon them. McManus squatted on no one; took up lands occupied by no one, and paid his taxes from year to year till he died.

No well, or other improvement than his own, was ever put on his lands, till his body was underground; and his lines were so well known that his compatriots could, with impunity, partition the dead man's estate without remonstrance from him or his absent sister.

As to my brother not remaining on his place longer than a few days at a time, it is very obvious to every disinterested mind, that it was necessary for him to come into the city from time to time, to supply his wants, and prosecute his business; and, in his absence, his man took care of his place. It was true, he could not be there in 1862, as he died in January, 1861; but up to the time of his death, he held possession of his land, without his right to it ever being questioned.

Why did these parties not question that right in his life time? From the evidence of Mr. Williams, of Victoria, (which is given in part in P. S.) as one of the early settlers, you will see by his testimony they had not one foot of land out there, until he sold it to them!

Why did Peter Donahue acknowledge to me he had some of my brother's land, and that he was tempted by T. P. Buckley to take it up? Why did these parties fall back on the law of limitation? Why was the Public Administrator, J. W. Brumagim, in 1864, allowed by the Probate Court to take out letters of Administration on McManus' estate—and he having acted under them—if my brother had no right to the land? For these men to sully my brother's name as a squatter upon their land, and insult his sister, by representing her to the public as prosecuting his mythical claim, is adding insult to injury to an old and respected name, and no less so to intercede, as they say, by making known my necessitous circumstances to them, when they have forced me into them. I had every reason before leaving my country to judge the Irish in this city, by that class I associated with at home, from the fact that they gave my brother an Irish grave, and over THIRTY THOUSAND men attended his funeral, which led me to think that such a man's property would be protected by his people. I now have refuted every material statement in their letter, and will not take any further notice of their communications.

ISABELLA McMANUS.

P. S.—The following is an extract from the evidence of Mr. Willliams, of Victoria, on the subject:

"I rode out with C. D. O'Sullivan and Hussey, in 1861, to the land to show it to them. Mr. J. P. Buckley was with us, and they told me that they wanted to buy this piece of land for Mr. Sullivan and Mr. Hussey, and that Mr. Buckley was going to buy the Maloon ranch adjoining for himself. They told me they expected San Francisco to grow, they were going to buy that property of Maloon, and my piece to put with it."

Irish Laborers.

The faithfulness displayed by British Statesmen in the fulfilment of promises is well exemplied in the following from the American Gael: Whoever else will help the laborers, the present Government certainly will not. Every session for the last three or more, Mr. Gladstone and one or other of his colleagues have been promising to bring in a bill to facilitate the erection of cottages for that class of the population; but up to the present they have never, so far as the public know, taken any step whatever to redeem their pledge. Last Monday, a question on the subject was put by Sir. Frederick Heygate to the House of Commons, and the usual answer was given. "I am afraid," said the Marquis of Hartington, "that at the present period of the session, and in the present state of business, it is doubtful if it will be practicable to bring in a bill on the subject of laborers' cottages in Ireland. I am not however (this is the usual saying clause), entirely without hope that I may be able to bring in a measure on the subject."

CITY HOTEL, DIXON.—We are glad to learn that our esteemed friend, T. K. Howe has opened a first class Hotel in Dixon, Solano County. With the beautiful climate for which Dixon is proverbial, ample accommodation and the politest of attendance, the City Hotel cannot fail to be a desirable place for those who require the bracing air of the country or whom business calls to Dixon. We hope that Mr. Howe may receive the extensive patronage which he deserves.

OUR PLACES OF AMUSEMENT.

CALIFORNIA THEATRE.

This week, Mr. Sothern closes his engagement at the California Theatre with results far exceeding the most sanguine expectations of the management. So much justly earned praise has been already bestowed on Mr. Sothern, that to say anything of his merits as an actor would be superfluous. Independent of his genius which is self-evident in his wonderful impersonations of Dundreary and David Garrick, he posseses all the attributes of a true gentlemen, and during his short stay in our city has made many friends. His forte is genteel comedy although in some parts of his favorite plays he evinces great dramatic power. On Monday next the play of Davy Crockett with Frank Mayo in the title role will be placed on the boards of the California Theatre. The play is of the sensational order, full of strong contrasts and startling denouments, exactly such a one as is calculated to suit the public taste after eccentricities of Dundreary, and the polite and insipid phrases of Brother Sam. Mr. Mayo is a gentleman who by energy and the exercise of his talents, has raised himself to an exalted position in the Dramatic World. He made his debut on the stage in the Old American Theatre of this city. His return to San Francisco has been hailed with pleasure by a numerous circle of enthusiastic friends and in fact by the entire play going public. We hope he may meet with the unequivocal success which he deserves.

SHIEL'S OPERA HOUSE

At this house the New Magdalen has drawn so well that the management continued it through the week. The Woman in White with Miss Pateman in the leading role and Harry Eytinge as "Count Fosco" will be the next piece produced.

PACIFIC COAST.

The Northern Pacific Railroad Company commenced the survey of Tacoma, their terminal city, on Thursday. Twenty men, in two divisions, began work near the mill. The surveys will occupy about thirty dsys. Five hundred workmen are to be placed on the construction of docks, depot and other buildings, next week. Speculators from all parts of the Sound and Oregon are crowding there. The steamer Eliza Anderson will be taken to Tacoma, and used as a floating hotel. It is rumored that the Railroad Company have purchased the mill of Aanson, Ackerson & Co. for one hundred thousand dollars. Seattle and Olympia papers are full of bitterness toward the new city and the road.

Cotton growing on the Muddy, in the vicinity of Lincoln, Nevada, is a grand success. The yield is greater and the quality superior, the plant growing to a greater height than in the cotton States. The cotton and woolen factory at Washington, Utah, has agreed to send a machine to the Muddy and gin the cotton, and pay twenty-five cents a pound for it on the ground.

A fire near Altomonte on Tuesday last burned about fifteen hundred acres of stubble owned John Campbell. The cause is supposed to have been a cigar, dropped by persons passing in a buggy. The wheat stacks and buildings were saved by the great exertions of the farmers in the vicinity.

Mr. G. S. Reuter, of Sonora, Tuolumne county, has produced this season some of the largest, and finest of silk cocoons, showing that climate and soil to be truly a suitable home for the culture of silk.

Toney, the Marysville bank robber, has made a full confession. He says the robbery was planned by P. W. Winkley. Toney's bail was fixed at $70,000.

Five hundred men are to go to work in the construction of docks, depots, etc., at Tacoma, the terminus of the Northern Pacific Railroad.

Three thousand dollars in old Spanish coins was recently found near the mouth of a canyon, in Los Angeles county.

Up to this time, eighty-six victims of the Modoc war have died. About eighty are wounded, many of them laimed for life.

Business Strategy.

The tricks of trade are as numerous as they are seductive and ingenious. The latest novelty in Paris is a Dry Good Store with free restaurant and billiard-room attached. The latter place of amusement is fitted up expressly for the benefit of loving benedicts who accompany their wives on a shopping expedition, while the trade is being effected they can employ their time profitably in punching the ivories or comforting the inner man, their presence in the sales room is only required when the bills are produced. What right minded husband could grumble at the price of a bonnet, shawl or any other insignificant article of female wear after being entertained in so respectable a manner? The experiment has proved an eminent success, but we doubt if it is as ingenious as the plan adopted by another well known Parisian firm which employs a superb clerk to stand at the door and softly in stage accents whispers, as each feminine customer flies past "How beautiful Madamoiselle is! How superbly dressed? or some other flattery of no interest to the general public but dear to the lovely recipient as the proverbial apple of the eye.

THE DAILY UNITED IRISHMAN.—The first Daily Irish paper published in America, made its appearance on Wednesday. It promises to be a spicy and enterprising journal. James O'Leary & Co., are the Publishers.

An epidemic has broken out among the calves in the county Wexford, by which large numbers have died.

CITY NEWS OF THE WEEK.

THERE is a gang of laborers working near Lone Mountain whose conduct would reflect credit on the heroes of the Lava Beds. On Monday last they engaged in a free fight, in which several of them were severely injured. Their war-like spirits were subdued by a club dexteriously handled by the foreman of the gang. After the pleasant little affray they turned their attention to a Chinese wash-house which had long been an eye-sore; and, banding together, rushed on the devoted celestials. They were met by the contents of a six-shooter discharged with greatrapidity and precision by an excited Chinaman; and thinking discretion the better part of valor, they turned and incontinentally fled.

A FATAL accident occurred at the corner of Mason and Sacramento streets, on Monday last, by which a man named Andrew Cummings lost his life. While the deceased, in company with John Gallihan, was busy in an excavation, a large piece of rock weighing nearly a ton became detached and fell on them from a height of fifteen feet, crushing in Cummings' skull and killing him instantly. Gallihan had both legs broken, and received such severe internal injuries that he died in the county hospital, whither he had been taken the following morning. He leaves a wife and several children in the East.

MADAMOISELLE ELIZABETH JOHNSON, a colored belle of the Barbary Coast who rejoices in thirteen aliases, was last week arrested for using vulgar language—a razor was found in her possession. As she is the second woman on whom a hirsute fertilizer has been discovered, it is evident that there is some mysterious combination amongst the colored ladies of the Coast. Unless some expert Chronicle reporter sheds the light of his genius on the case it will probably remain shrouded in impenetrable gloom

NEW FIRM.—We are pleased to inform the community that, at the suggestion of several of our prominent business houses, Messrs. Henry MacSorley and Samuel A. Lowe have entered into partnership for the purpose of Bill Posting and General Advertising in this city and its suberbs. The general dulness of trade renders economy a necessity; and we are sure that the charges of this firm will be suited to the times. We trust that the patronage of the public will be freely extended to it, and we heartily wish them every success.

JOHN L. DURKEE, Fire Marshal, who has just entered upon the ninth year of office, reports that during his term of office there have been 2,475 fires, and fire alarms of which 1,846 were actual fires. The buildings burned number 2,313; the total loss of property amounted to $5,475,078 59; the loss by fire during the year ending June 30th last was $381,860, the smallest for nine years except the year ending June 30th, 1865, when the loss was $296,233 57.

J. C. BURDELL, who was last week charged with stealing a watch, chain and locket from a lady, has evidently been reading Oliver Twist or taken a leaf from Boss Tweed's diary. When accused of the crime, he affected the greatest astonishment and volunteered to catch the real thief, but his captors being old birds were not to be caught with such chaff. At the present moment, Monsieur Burdell languishes in the Broadway Bastile, while his portrait ornaments the walls of the "Rogues Gallery."

A BUCOLIC individual rejoicing in the patronymic of Ryan was found in the streets last week "crazy drunk." He was armed with a sickle, and good-naturedly invited the passers-by to engage in a scrimmage—no one responded to the kind invitation till a bellicose star appeared on the scene and amid considerable applause disarmed him. Judge Louderback has expressed his disapprobation of such unchristian conduct in a very feeling manner.

ALL the ice consumed in the city is manufactured by a firm whose factory is situated on Tehama street, between Fourth and Fifth. Only three laborers, two engineers and a foreman are employed in the manufacture. The ice is sold to the American Russian Company at about $10 per ton, and retailed to the public at $50—quite a profitable monopoly.

THOSE desperadoes who without compunction would cut a throat for a five-dollar piece have let slip a chance to distinguish themselves and retire on a competency which may never again be offered. On monday last a special car containing greenbacks to the amount of eight millions of dollars arrived here. The car was in charge of Colonel Frank Jones, of the Redemption Bureau, who brought with him ten U. S. soldiers and six treasury clerks.

A HORSE attached to a buggy while proceeding along Montgomery street on Tuesday last slipped and fell, breaking one of the shafts of the buggy attached. Result—terrific excitement among the penny-a-liners, and sensational paragraphs in the morning papers.

A CHINAMAN fell down in a fit last week, and to all appearances shuffled off the mortal coil. Just as his celestial friends were about to raise an appropriate howl over his dirty carcass, he astonished them by rising on his elbow, clewing up his pig-tail and gallantly swallowing an opium pill. The twenty dollars which would have been lavished on his burial will be saved to China.

FIVE specimens of the noble red man of Nevada arrived in this city last week and applied for loddings at the City Prison—they were provided with a cell all to themselves. For a few days they amused themselves in angling for plethoric smelt and rock cod. At the expiration of that time they returned to Truckee, whence they came to see the city.

THE Custom House officers put up a neat little job to catch some smugglers of opium, and they engineered it so successfully that one of them, Louis Levy, was arraigned last week in the U. S. Circuit Court on a charge of smuggling. It took the jury half an hour to deliberate before they acquitted him.

ON Sunday last a boat containing a lady and gentleman upset near Saucelito. After the stomach-pump and restoratives had been applied, the occupants returned to the city by steamer with disheveled locks and an expression of countenance anything but heroic.

IN describing the baby-show, the Post man becomes enthusiastic over the infantile competitors, and devoutly wishes another similar exhibition. Exidently he is a family man.

RAPHAEL CASTRO is a kleptomaniac who exercises his peculiar talents in the appropriation of coffee. On Tuesday last he took a package of the fragrant herb from a store on Broadway. "Oh! solitude, where are thy charms," will be the burthen of his song in the City prison for some time to come.

LAST week Kate Clark walked out of one of the windows on the second-story of the Bonifice Restaurant, on Market street. She will rusticate in the county hospital for a few weeks.

ALL persons who wish their names on the Great Register had better apply at the City Hall for registration before the first of August.

THE County Court will open on Monday next. For the past week it has been closed on account of Judge Stanley's continued illness.

MISS LIZZIE CONROY was last week elected a teacher of the eighth grade in the Tehama-street school.

THE Branch mint last week coined $1,140,000—an average of $190,000 per day.

THE ladies' fair will net about $12,000 for the orphans.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

X. TWIABA X.

THE WHITE SAGE.—A new preparation is offered to the public for the restoration of the hair by Dr. L. Terry, 323 Third street, and from the great number of testimonials published by prominent citizens of Elko, Nevada, of its efficacy in giving strength to the hair, and the speedy return of it to those who have been bald, oblige us to look upon it with more favor than the thousand other preparations already in the market. The Elko Independent says: "A decoction of White Sage will accomplish more in restoring bald heads, fastening falling hair, and renovating and giving healthy action to the scalp than a whole store of the usual remedies advertised for that purpose. Hundreds now in Nevada can testify to this fact, and a trial will convince any doubting Joseph that what we say of it in this respect will be borne out by results, if he will give it a fair trial." If such is the case, the Doctor will reap a rich harvest, for no other city can boast of as many bald-headed people as San Francisco The medicine can be obtained from every druggist. None genuine without the signature of L. TERRY, M. D., on the outside of the wrapper. HEATHFIELD, BOGEL & Co., General Agents. Sole Distiller, DR. L. TERRY, Elko, Nevada.

SPECIAL NOTICE—An article that will firmly mend Furniture, Crockery, Glasswase, Statuary, Meerschaum, Dolls, Toys, Leather, and all ordinary household articles likely to be broken, is as dispensable as it is valuable. These requisites are to be found in the well known GIANT CEMENT, which is put up in tin cans only. It invariably gives satisfaction, and is now for sale by druggists, stationers, grocers, and the Giant Cement Company, No. 417 Washington street (opposite the Post Office) San Francisco. *

DRINK FOR THE THIRSTY.—When one feels the need of moistening the clay without poisoning it, or running the risk of falling into low society, it is often a puzzle to know which of the thousand and one wine-houses to patronize. Without saying a word in depreciation of other respectably-conducted establishments, it is only just to observe that our next door neighbor, P. F. Brady, late of the firm of Brady & Neely, 713 Howard street, has fitted up the La Grande Exchange, 610 Market street and No. 11 Post street (opposite the Masonic Temple) in a style which does credit to his taste. The La Grande affords the advantages of the quiet club without the drawbacks of the saloon. For excellence of foreign wines and liquors, and for the perfection of native "fixins," to say nothing of the attentive courtesy of Mr. Brady, we do not think it can be surpassed. *

PICTURES.—By reference to our advertising columns it will be seen that our friends Kenny & Co. have taken and fitted up in superb style a large store in the new hotel building corner of Fifth and Market streets. They have lately returned from the East, bringing with them a large and well-assorted stock of pictures of more than common style of art. Their lengthened experience in the trade has enabled them to offer superior drawings, chromos, prints, and framed pictures at a moderate rate. They have now on exhibition pictures of a hundred classes and representative of scenery and life in all climes. When inspecting their varied stock, we naturally gave most attention to what was Irish. We found the Giant's Causeway, Vale of Avoca, Lakes of Killarney and other familiar places as they should be, as well as several delineations of muscular Christianity, which should be seen to be appreciated. *

THE HIBERNIA HALL, 246 Third Street, is newly fitted up in superb style, and fit for the accommodation of large social parties and military displays. It is one of the best Public Halls in the city. The new improvements deserve the attention of public speakers. In this Hall the movements of the audience create no noise Silence is the ally of eloquence. *

WHAT IS ALUCOLEIN?—A preparation of Cod Liver Oil, without any disagreeable taste; the most efficacious remedy for all pulmonary complaints. Prepared and sold by James G. Steele & Co., 521 Montgomery street.

BALLADS FOR THE PEOPLE.

THE CAILIN DEAS.

Air—"COLLEEN DA'S CROOTIA NA MO."*

The cold rain of eve was descending,
Bright purple robed mountain and tree,
As I through Glenmornein was wending,
A wanderer from o'er the blue sea.
'Twas the lap of a west-looking mountain,
Its woody slope bright with the glow,
Where sang by a murmuring fountain,
COLLEEN DA'S CROOTIA NA MO.

Dark clouds where a gold tinge reposes
But picture her brown, wavy hair,
And her teeth look'd as if in a rose's
Red bosom a snow-flake gleamed fair,
As her tones down the green dell went ringing,
The list'ning thrush mimicked them low,
And the brooklet harped soft to the singing
Of COLLEEN DA'S CROOTIA NA MO.

"At last, o'er thy long night, dear Erin!
Dawns the Sun of thy Freedom," sang she;
"B thy mountaineers still are despairing—
Ah, he who mid bordmen was free,
Ah, my Diarmid, the patriot-hearted,
Who would fire them with hope for the blow,
Far Erin! from thee is he parted,
Far from COLLEEN DA'S CROOTIA NA MO."

Her tears on a sudden, brimmed over,
Her voice trembled low and less clear;
To listen, I stepped from my cover,
But the bough-rustle broke on her ear;
She started—she redden'd—"A Stoirin!†
My Diarmid!—Oh, can it be so?"
And I clasped to my glad heart sweet Moirin,
The COLLEEN DA'S CROOTIA NA MO.

* "An cailin deas cruidte nam-bo," should be pronounced by the mere English reader as "collyeen dass crootia na ma"—it signifies, "The pretty girl of the milking of cows," or the pretty milkmaid.
† "Vulgo, Asthoreen."

DRIMIN DONN DILIS.*

JOHN WALSH.†

Oh! Drimin donn dilis! the landlord has come,
Like a foul blast of death has he swept o'er our home,
He has withered our rooftree—beneath the cold sky,
Poor, houseless and homeless, to-night must we lie.

My heart it is cold as the white winter's snow;
My brain is on fire, and my blood's in a glow.
Oh! Drimin donn dilis, 'tis hard to forgive
When a robber denies us the right we should live.

With my health and my strength, with hard labor and toil,
I dried the wet marsh and I tilled the harsh soil—
I moiled the long day through, from morn till even,
And I thought in my heart I'd a foretaste of heaven.

The summer shone round us, above and below,
The beautiful summer that make the flowers blow.
Oh! 'tis hard to forget it, and think I must bear
That strangers shall reap the reward of my care.

Your limbs they were plump then, your coat it was silk
And never was wanted the mether of milk,
For freely it came in the calm summer's noon,
While you munched to the time of the old milking croon.

How often you left the green side of the hill,
To stretch in the shade and to drink of the rill;
And often I freed you before the gray dawn,
From your snug little pen at the edge of the bawn.

But they racked and they ground me with tax and with rent,
'Till my heart it was sore and my life-blood was spent;
A day they have finished; and on the wide world,
With the mocking of friends from my home was I hurl'd.

I knelt down three times for to utter a prayer,
But my heart it was seared, and the words were not there;
Oh! wild were the thoughts through my dizzy head came,
Like the rushing of wind through a forest of flame.

I bid you, old comrade, a long last farewell,
For the gaunt hand of famine has clutched us too well,
It severed the master and you, my good cow,
With a blight on his life, and a brand on his brow.

* "Drimin," is the favorite name of a cow in the Gaelic tongue. In "The Ballad Poetry," published by James Duffy, Dublin, and edited by Charles Gavan Duffy, there is given a translation by J. J. Callahan, of Cork, of a popular Irish Jacobite song; spirited and highly characteristic of the country. "Drimin" is also one of the allegorical names which the people applied to Ireland, by which they sheltered their expressions of love for their country, when it was a crime to praise her. There are in the country many fairy tales connected with dark cows; the dark small breed of cows, which prevailed in the country, have a weird-like look about them. Owenson, father of Lady Morgan, used to sing on the Irish stage the old song, "Drimin Dhown Dheelish, thou silk of the kine," with such feelings as to bring tears to the eyes of all listeners who had any sympathy for their country. "Dhown" means brown, and "dheelish" is a term expressive of the fondest affection.

Strange Discovery in an Irish Bog.

A letter to the Tyrone Constitution from Dr. Smith, rector of Drumraga, contains the following interesting intelligence relative to a strange discovery in an Irish bog:

Last week some turf-cutters were at their work in a bog near my residence (Drum Bog) when the spade cut from the bank what appeared to be a human hand. On further search they found nearly the whole skin of a man of large size. It was black and as thick as buckskin. When spread out for me on the ground much of it was torn and in strips, but there remained the whole arm like a coat sleeve, only split up from coat to shoulder; the right hand, with the nails (and very large ones) still attached; the skin of the right foot with the great toe nail, reaching up above the ankle about twelve inches altogether; neither hand nor foot was split. The other portions looked like the covering of the back, shoulders, chest, and, perhaps face, and the whole remnants were enough in quantity to account for the whole integuments of the body, apparently. It was found not two feet below the surface, but near it, and partly over it was a piece of wood, as if placed there to cover up a sort of plank. One might have supposed it to be the skin of a man that had been flayed, were it not that the hand and foot (both pretty well preserved) did not exhibit those incisions which must have been made, I suppose, in stripping off the skin. It had clearly belonged to a man of great stature. The people in the neighborhood had made a new box on Monday for the purpose of holding the remains, so that they might be interred. It was probably in that bog for a hundred years or more. I do not think it likely that any action of peat could have removed flesh and bones so completely leaving the skin and nails; whereas if these bones had been buried, the antiseptic properties of bog stuff would preserve them for centuries."

THE RISING OF '98,

With an Account of the Volunteers, French Alliances, and Expeditions.

"REBELLION! foul dishonoring word!
Whose wrongful blight so oft has stained
The holiest cause that tongue or sword
Of mortal ever lost or gained—
How many a spirit, born to bless,
Has sunk beneath that withering name,
Whom but a day's—an hour's success—
Had wafted to eternal fame."
MOORE.

By this treaty the Irish Catholics were allowed to enjoy what is called the rights of subjects, and the Irish army was embarked for France, according to agreement. The Irish, during this war, had fought remarkably well. The battle of the Boyne could not be called an English victory; the first seige of Limerick was certainly an Irish victory; at Aughrim, the Irish had gained the day, when a chance shot (which 'tis said, would kill the devil) took off St. Ruth, the French general who commanded the Irish. At the second seige of Limerick, the Dutch general Ginckle was at the head of an army of 40,000 men, with 80 pieces of cannon and 9 mortars. After having reduced a great part of the town to ruins, and effecting a breech in the fortifications wide enough to admit a hundred men abreast, he was afraid to risk an assault on the town. In this state of things, while the wet season was fast approaching, General Ginckle, by direction of his Dutch master, William offered the Irish favorable terms, and they were accepted. A few days after the treaty was signed, the long-expected French fleet arrived off the Irish coasts; and the Irish, from a false notion of honor, instead of falling on like men knocking all the English and Dutch on the head, and driving them out of the country stuck to the treaty, and retired to France. They ought to have recollected, that nothing can be more dishonorable than to let an enemy forcibly enter into or take possession of one's country; all free nations punish such invading offenders with death. Are not the notions of national and female honor similar?—surely the forcible seizure or possession of either constitutes dishonor! When the Irish had embarked for France, the English enemy, of course, broke the treaty in every article. The old penal laws were now re-enacted, and new ones forged. The foreign ascendancy and English-connection faction, being frightened at the noble stand made by the Irish in the late war, now resolved to completely break down their power, and reduce them to slavery, which they effected. In this state the Irish continued, till the American war commenced in 1775. Some of the severest penal laws were repealed in 1778. In the contest with America, all the forces that England could scrape together were required, and Ireland was left without any English troops. The French having joined the Americans, the Irish slave owners became alarmed at the withdrawal of the regular English army. Having petitioned the English government for aid, they were told that there was none to spare—that they should defend themselves; hence the Volunteers were organized in 1777. This Protestant militia gradually increased, till it amounted to 80,000 or 100,000 men.

With the success of the Americans, the progress of freedom advanced, and it even reached Ireland. France, Spain, and Holland having joined America, England was humiliated and beaten. In 1782 the Irish Volunteers compelled England to acknowledge the independence of the Irish parliament. A peace with America took place in 1783, and England now directed all her attention to Ireland; and determined to recover by corruption, what she had lost from weakness. The truth of it was, the question of the independence of the Irish legislature and free trade had been unamiously passed by a corrupt Irish parliament. The genius and oratory of Grattan, backed the resolutions of the Dungannon Volunteers of Febuary 1782, and the borough-mongering parliament yielded to the pressure from without, because it could not do otherwise.

The English government and parliament acknowledged the independence of Ireland for the same reason. However, the Volunteers, after the fever of excitement had passed over, began to cooly reflect, on the composition of the Irish parliament, which was not what it ought to have been—a representative body—but a den of brokering bigotted thieves—a set of corrupt jobbing judases, who sold their votes, or rather the Irish nation's votes, to Englishmen for money every year. In order to ascertain the state of Irish parliamentary representation, the Volunteers caused to be printed and published lists of the Irish House of Commons designating the mode in which each representative was elected, and by whose personal influence or nomination; and also stating the numbers of persons who nominally returned the members, and as far as could be ascertained, what money or valuable consideration was given for such unconstitutional representation.

The Volunteers at length resolved to demand a reform of parliament, and to bring the measure before the existing House of Commons, in a way which they conceived would render it irresistible. They accordingly determined to form a national representative assembly to be composed of 300 delegates, selected from the different regiments of Irish Volunteers. On the 10th of November 1783, the grand national Convention assembled at the Royal Exchange, and subsequently adjoined to the Rotunda. Lord Charlemont was elected chairman, and the assembly continued its sittings till December 2nd, 1783. Had this Convention been conducted by honest leaders, it would have, as a matter of course, obtained all its objects. However, this was not the case; that ignorant vice—Irish confidence—as usual left room for Irish treachery to act, and England triumphed.

For some unaccountable reason, Grattan stood aloof from the Rotunda meeting. The Convention adopted a measure of parliamentary reform; and decided that their sittings should continue till the parliament determined the question. This plan of reform, framed by Flood, was accordingly introduced into the Irish House of Commons; and after violent debates, was finally rejected by the Boroughmongers, who certainly could hardly be expected to vote for their own destruction. Had the Convention simply ordered a company of Volunteers to enter the House, with fixed bayonets, the desired reform could have been afterwards very easily brought about.

The Irish Reform bill was rejected by a corrupt majority of 158 to 49 honest members, who voted for the measure. Of the majority, 138 were placemen, the very persons on whom the bill was intended to operate. "It, is," says a celerated author, "very remarkable that it was 138 placemen that rejected the Reform bill in 1783, and that it was the same number of placemen who carried the Union bill in 1800, which if reform had succeeded, never could have been passed. Upon this very decision, ultimately depended the existence of Irish independence. The Volunteers were insulted, their bill was rejected without a hearing, their intentions were calumniated, even their name was reprobated; their services were forgotten, and that very corruption which they sought to reform, thus had its full revenge."

Owing to the teachery of that aristocratic noodle and bigot Caulfield (Lord Charlemont), the Convention of Volunteers assembled at the Rotunda was suddenly dissolved. The acting of the trick is thus described by Sir Jonah Barrington, in his Rise and Fall of the Irish Nation:—"On Monday morning he (Charlemont) repaired to the Rotunda before the usual hour of sitting. None but his own immediate partizans were aware of his intention; the meeting was expected to be most important, and the delegates had no suspicion of his Lordship's early attendance. On taking the chair, a delegate immediately arose to expatiate on the insults which the Convention had received during the debate of Saturday. His Lordship became alarmed; a protracted statement might give time for the arrival of delegates, when all his objects would surely be frustated. He at once took a step which had scarcely a parallel for duplicity, and which, though of the shallowest nature, proved the most effectual. He instantly silenced the member, as being out of order, on the ground that one House of Parliament never could take notice of what passed in another; and that the Convention had adopted the rules and orders of parliament. Thus by collecting every ray of feebleness and absurdity into one focus, he prevented any continuation of the subject; and whilst he declared the Convention a house of parliament, resolved to terminate its existence. After some conversation, a farewell address was rapidly passed to his Majesty, and his Lordship boldly adjourned the Convention—SINE DIE. The Rotunda was quickly vacated, and when the residue of the delegates—the ardent friends of the Volunteer body—came to take their places, they found the doors closed, the chairman withdrawn, and that body upon which the nation relied for its independence, dissolved for ever. The delegates, mortified and abashed returned to their homes; many friends of Earl Charlemont were soon ashamed of their conduct; and his Lordship's want of sincerity, for the first time, was indisputably proved, and underwent well-merited animadversions."

With the dissolution of the Convention, the power of the Volunteers rapidly declined; and all hopes of parliamentary reform likewise vanished. "The people," says Sir Jonah Barrington, "were severed, but the government remained compact; the parliament was corrupted the Volunteers were paralyzed, and the high spirit of the nation exhibited a rapid declension. The jealousy of patriots is always destructive of liberty. A new event, however, soon proved the weak delusions of Earl Charlemont. At the dissolution of the Convention, he recommended a Reform Bill to be presented to parliament, as emanating solely from civil bodies, unconnected with military character. Every experiment is silly, where its failure can be clearly anticipated, and almost every man in Ireland well knew, that such a bill would be lost in such a parliament. Mr. Flood, however tried the experiment, and it failed; he attempted it without spirit, because he was without confidence. Mr. Grattan supported it with languor, because it was the measure of his rival. The military bill had been scouted, because it was military, and the civil bill was rejected because it was popular. A corrupt senate never wants a vicious apology. The Volunteers now drooped, yet their resolutions were published, their meetings were not suspended, and their reviews continued; but these appeared only as boyish shows, to amuse the languid vanity of their deluded general. He passed their lines in military state; he received their salutes with grace and condescension, and recommended them to be tranquil and obedient; and after a peaceful campaign of four hours' duration, composed his mild and grammatical despatches, and returned to his Marino, and to the enjoyment of the more congenial elegancies of literature and of private friendships. The temperate system now gained ground; some patriots lost their energy; others lost their influence, and the government experienced the wisdom of their negative measures. That noble institution, the Volunteers of Ireland, survived, however, these blows some years. This only luminary of her sphere was, by the device of the government, gradually obscured, and, at length extinguished.

The French revolution which commenced in 1789, gave a renewed impulse to the feeling of liberty, which was first engendered from the successful American revolution. In two years after the French movement commenced, we trace the origin of the National Association of United Irishmen, whose noble leaders—because they loved their country, and wanted to have Ireland for the Irish—were cut off by the English.

On such men, a Protestant scholar of the Irish University, Trinity College, has (to his eternal honor) composed those noble "Irish lines; which the mock trials of 1844, "attacked:" but which are universally sung by the people—The Memory of the Dead—and well known by the first line beginning,—"Who fears to speak of '98."

The Manners of the Shah.

The Dundalk Democrat is responsible for the following: A good sample of the description of stories which are everywhere circulating of the doings of the Shah since his introduction to European society is furnished in tna Times of Germany, a new journal for English readers on the Continent. In the article descriptive of his Majesty's visit to Berlin and other German towns, it is stated—He has no idea whatever of European Court etiquette, nor even of ordinary politeness. One day at Berlin he kept the special train which was to take him to Potsdom—where a review was to be held in his honor—waiting for three quarters of an hour. The Empress was at the station at the appointed time—twelve but his Oriental Highness only arrived at a quarter to one; and seated himself in the saloon carriage without a word of apology. It is said at the Victoria Theater Berlin, he spat on the pit from the private box, and that instead of taking the tea which was brought him, out of the cup, held the teapot in both hands and drank out of the spout. His Majesty it seems, was highly pleased with the ballet, and on being taken behind the scenes he pinched the arms of the ballet girls and patted their cheeks. One day some of his attendants were discovered forcing a sheep into the private apartments of the palace; upon an interpreter being fetched, it was ascertained that the Shah never ate any meat unless it was slaughtered in his presence. So the sheep was carried upstairs into the elegantly furnished saloon which his Majesty occupied and there killed. To watch his Oriental Majesty eat is most amusing. One day he absorbed a half-pound of butter on the table in a very short time, by sticking his royal fingers into it, and then sucking then. At the end of last week the Shah arrived at Wiesbaden, accompanied by his suite, and contrary to all expectation, for it was stated that all the women were sent back to Persia from Moscow by three wives, who were closely veiled. His Majesty had no trunks with him, but a number of bundles, all his clothes being tied up in large silk handkerchiefs. He travels with five horses, whose tails and manes are dyed green and red. The Shah of Persia looks like a man who is "bored to death," and there is no doubt but that he is. In conclusion we may say that there is nothing particularly noble about the Shah and his suite. Their walk reminds me somewhat of that of a Yorkshire ploughman.

British Morality.

An English member of Parliament, Mr. Samuel Plimsoll, has for some time past been laying before the public a series of startling and awful revelations concerning the practices adopted by a great many of England's "merchant princes" for the purpose of putting money into their pockets. These practices are not only grossly fraudulent—they are worse than that—they involve a wholesale and delib erate sacrifice of human life. The statements put forward by Mr. Plimsoll are absolutely appalling, but of their substantial accuracy, no doubt is entertained. They are, in the main, supported by proofs which cannot be controverted, and they are accepted by the mass of Englishmen as being true beyond all denial.

From the work which Mr. Plimsoll has published, and from the public speeches he has delivered on this subject, it appears that among a large number of British ship-owners and traders it is customary to send ships to sea so contrived and prepared that they shall drown the crew and lose the cargo. Those enterprising British merchants take rotten ships and overload them to such an extent that they are certain either to fall in pieces in mid-ocean, founder in the first gale of wind they fall in with, or become unmanageable and go to wreck upon the rocks. The object is to obtain the amount of insurance effected upon the vessels and their cargoes, which is largely in excess of their value. As for the men's lives—for that those British traders care nothing.—Nation.

AMERICAN LAW AND BRITISH JUSTICE.—Every true Briton takes a delight in contrasting the judgenents of our Law Courts with those of his own country's Tribunals.—Even dissatisfied litigants who entertain not the slighest respect for the British Constitution often exclaim after being worsted on an assault and battery case and smarting under the lash of some legal and sardonic shyster—"How superior are the Law Courts of England—how immaculate are their functionaries, when compared with such shining lights as Bailiff Englander and —— nothing of the kind—it is only a halucination and unfortunately for our people they have long since discovered it to be such. Some idea of the real state of affairs may be gathered from the case of a Mounted Policeman named Monroe. For the forcible violation of a young and innocent girl he was sentenced to one year of imprisonment. Had he been a Nationalist and guilty of the henious crime of having a percussion cap in his possession he would have received a punishment more severe and degrading.

Addressing the Shah.

If the bon ton of London Society, wish to be strictly polite in their conversation and intercourse with the "Shah," at present the lion of the day they will be constrained to adopt a style of conversation different to the gruff monosyllabic manner so much admired in English tourists. This is how the glib courtiers of the Eastern Potentate address their omnipotent master. "Higu and Powerful Star, whose head is covered with the sun, whose movements can only be compared with that of the extent of the heavens; mighty lord of Mount Caucasus and Mount Tarsus, of the four rivers—the Euphrates, the Tigris, the Arexes, and the Indus; offspring of honors; mirror of virtue rose of pleasure and nutmeg of consolation."

A WRITER of the Western Celt gives six reasons why he abstains from the sin of Intemperance—One (and we gravely suspect the most powerful reason) was a scarcity of dimes in the editorial exchequer.

Physicians' charges are bitter pills, but patiently borne.

A fire in Bantas last Sunday destroyed $3,000 worth of property.

THE FLAG OF TIPPERARY.

BY T. D. O'CALLAGHAN.

A poem written for the presentation on July the fourth, to the N. Y. 69th Reg't, of the flag sent them by the patriotic ladies of Tipperary.

God bless the flag!
No pirate rag
Is this engoldened banner;
God bless our land,
The old and grand,
While ocean breezes fan her—
Whose hills and plains
In slavery's chains
The Saxon is enthralling
While o'er the sea
Right mournfully
For aid she's vainly calling!
Hurrah! hurrah!
Erin-go-bragh!
Thy exiled sons and daughters
Their homage pay
To thee to-day,
By Hudson's rolling waters.

Proscribed at home
Our exiles roam
Through many a strange and far land,
And many a one
Hails freedom's sun
In this the "stripe" and "star" land.
Nor Freedom's smiles,
Nor fortune's wiles,
'Neath alien skies ensnaring,
Where'er we range,
Can e'er estrange
Our hearts from dear old Erin.
And thus to-day,
Far, far away
From Irish hill and mireland,
On Freedom's ground
We rally round
The exiled flag of Ireland.

Each sheeny fold
To-day unrolled
Of green with gold bespangled,
Has never yet
'Gainst foe been set
In battle's maze entangled,
When next we stand
In phalanx'd band
Old Ireland's foe confronting,
That flag shall stream—
That "sunburst" gleam—
Above the Saxon "bunting,"
On Irish ground
Encompass'd round
With Freedom's steel and cannon;
Outstreaming free
For Libertie
By Liffey, Suir and Shannon.

A very cruel murder occurred at Louisville (Ky,) on Saturday last, the victim was the wife of James Gannon a New Orleans policeman, the murderer was her own husband—from whom she had but a short time before separated on account of his cruel treatment—a reconciliation having been effected however, he came to Louisville and they lived together for three weeks, when she again left him. Gannon went to the house where she resided on Saturday, and after some conversation placed a pistol to her breast and fired. The unfortunate woman fell to the ground when another shot was discharged with fatal effect. She died almost immediately. After a short chase Gannon was arrested and lodged in gaol.

The Convention of Boot and shoe Makers of Massachusetts, which held its session in Boston on the 20th and 21st inst., has adopted a resolution that, in view of the lack of interest manifested by the shoe makers in the welfare of their craft, a request be sent to the several shoe manufacturing towns of this State that the shoemakers meet and consider the cause of this decline in interest, and that from each town a representative be sent to a Convention hereafter to be held; the results arrived at by such Convention to be submitted to a mass meeting of boot and shoe makers.
